

DEPORTATION TWO LEE COUNTY ALIENS IS URGED

FARMER HELD
FOR SLAYING
FULTON GIRLHe Tried to Get Into the Phone Office Some Weeks Ago

John Comiskey, aged 38, farmer, residing at Cottonwood, four miles east of Fulton, was held to the grand jury without bail for the murder of Mrs. Marie McKee, Fulton telephone operator, by the coroner's jury late yesterday afternoon. Comiskey, denying his guilt and contending strongly that he had no knowledge of the murder, was hurried from the Fay furniture store, where the inquest was held, and placed in a waiting automobile with Sheriff Hamilton and State's Attorney Robert Beese and taken to the Whiteside county jail at Morrison.

Comiskey insisted upon taking the witness stand yesterday afternoon and telling the coroner's jury his story. He had been warned of his constitutional rights, that testimony he might give might be used against him in a later hearing, but despite all this, he talked fluently and asked to be permitted to "talk" to the jury. After being sworn, Comiskey started out with the following narrative:

Prisoner's Story.
"My name is John Comiskey. I am 38 years old and live near Cottonwood. I know absolutely nothing about this thing and all this stuff that has been said about me here is wrong. I came to Fulton last night and got here about 8:30. I could have come in sooner but stopped out east of town and helped a fellow patch a tube and fix up a tire. I talked to some of the fellows about town and bought two plugs of tobacco and then went home. I was only here about 15 minutes. I drove to town in my own car."

"I haven't talked to Mrs. McKee for a long time. I have seen her pass by places where I would be in, but haven't spoken to her. I was standing in Johnson's confectionery store the last time I saw her and she passed by but I did not talk to her."

Claimed Her Debtor.
"It was back about the first of August, no, I mean July when we talked last. Now, so far as making trouble at the telephone office, I have never talked to her at the telephone office. We did have a little argument back in July. It was over money she owed me. She promised to pay me and I told her to leave the money at the place she was staying. She said she didn't have to pay me and I told her that if she was any kind of a woman she would pay the bill. It was all over five dollars. She got huffy and we had a little spat. She paid the money all right. I got it in a card from the Fulton bank and then sat down and wrote her a nice letter thanking her for it."

"I used to go with Marie, Mrs. McKee, I mean, and she had told me about how good a woman she was. I liked her all right and went with her for about six or seven months, then I saw another party with her."

"It was June 7, no it was the fourth of July that I went up to the telephone office about a quarter of ten to call up a party at Davenport. When I got to the top of the stairs I noticed a paper over the glass in the door. I tried the door but it was locked and nobody came to let me in. I went down stairs again and went around and climbed up the pole."

"Did you pull a screen out of the window that time?" asked one of the jurors.
"Yes, I did. Yes I pulled the screen out and saw her in the private office. There was another man in there too. I got down and went to the confectionery store and called her up but when I started to talk she hung up the receiver. I was mad that time when I pulled the screen out. She had been trying to force me to marry her, but that finished it with me. I did not know who the other person was and don't know yet but if I was to see him I could point him out."

"How were you dressed when you came to Fulton last night?" Comiskey was asked by a juror.
"Just as I am now, blue overalls and work shirt, the same clothes I have worn for a week," he responded.

"Well, what time did you get home last night?" he was then asked.
"It was right around 10 o'clock when I got back home."

"Who composes your family?" was another question.
"My mother and my sister," Comiskey replied.

"Did they know when you came in last night, I mean when you got home?" was the next question.
"No, they didn't know who I was. I am out and around nights some and they don't pay any attention to the times I come in."

Why Postoffice Men
Talk in their Sleep

A woman shopper approached the post office clerk at the stamp window. "I would like to look at your red two-cent stamps," she said. The clerk obligingly brought out a sheet of 100 stamps. Pointing to one of the stamps in the center of the sheet, the discriminating customer sweetly said: "I'll take that one, please."

FATHER FOLEY
TELLS VERSION OF HARMON FRAYDenies There Was An Altercation When Clash Occurred

From the statement in last evening's Telegraph, one would infer that the assault on Father Moore in Harmon Monday evening was the result of an altercation. There was no altercation. Father Moore was going home from the store about 7:30 p. m., when his assailant came from behind a tree under cover of the darkness and without saying a word struck him sideways across the mouth with an iron grease cup, a part of a plow weighing about two pounds, tearing his lips so that they had to be stitched by a doctor.

The blow coming unawares and in the darkness he was stunned and he fell, but in a moment he was on his feet and grappled with the assailant, knocked the iron from his hand and threw him down, or both went down together in the struggle. Then the assailant bit him like a dog, cutting his fingers to the bone. That caused Father Moore to cry out in pain. He was heard by a person in the house who by who came with a lantern, and pulled the assailant away, thus saving the fingers from being bitten clean off and in all probability the whole hand from being lacerated.

If the blow of the iron grease cup had struck him straight on the head instead of being deflected, striking him across the mouth and tearing his lips, Father Moore would probably have been dead now.

The assailant left without speaking a word. Hence there was no altercation. But there was a treacherous, sneaky, cowardly assault with a deadly weapon under cover of darkness.

By the light of the lantern Father Moore saw the dastardly assailant. All this information I have had from Father Moore personally and from the person who pulled off his assailant. I have written this in the cause of justice and decency so that Father Moore should not be injured in his reputation as well as in his person.

Proctor and Sprague in Agreement on Big Note

Chicago, Sept. 24.—(AP)—An agreement reached overnight by counsel concerning the portions of 67 depositions to be introduced in evidence in the suit of Col. Williams C. Proctor of Cincinnati against Col. A. A. Sprague of Chicago, for $50,000, involving a note for $100,000 for expenditure in the General Wood presidential campaign in 1920, was reported to the court today. Federal Judge Slick of South Bend, Ind., is presiding.

Col. Proctor was chairman of the Wood campaign committee and Col. Sprague was treasurer. The former is suing to recover one-half of the note for $100,000 which Sprague indorsed and which Proctor paid. Proctor claims Sprague endorsed the note and promised to pay half of it. Sprague insists he made no such promise.

It was expected reading of the depositions would occupy today and probably all of tomorrow.

CITY PLANNING
ONLY SOLUTION
TRAFFIC CHAOSImportant Streets are Inadequate for Demands of Life

The real solution to the problems of traffic congestion is city planning, declares Alvan Macaulay, President of the Packard Motor Car Company after a survey of first-hand information from hundreds of cities in all sections of the country. The majority of over 250 cities of over 10,000 population which have been studied in detail have traffic problems which are steadily growing worse. Present methods of control. The complete data and a comprehensive analysis have been issued by Mr. Macaulay in a brochure entitled "City Planning and Automobile Traffic Problems."

Streets Inadequate

"The outstanding fact revealed," says Mr. Macaulay, "is that the important traffic streets of a large proportion of the 253 cities studied are inadequate for either the moving traffic or stationary vehicles which must use them. There is no logical relation between the width of important streets and traffic use of them. In the majority of the two hundred-odd cities and this situation is particularly true of the older and smaller cities. In less than a quarter of the cities are the business streets wider than the main thoroughfares; in three-eighths the business streets are equal in width to the main thoroughfares and in the remaining three-eighths the business streets are narrower. In most of the cities the streets are utterly inadequate to provide parking space where it is most needed. Already a third of the cities have widened some of their streets in order to accommodate traffic, and in fully a half, traffic has become congested to such a degree that widening of streets involving enormous expenditures is now urgent."

"What these conditions mean in accidents, transportation, cost of living, inconvenience, extra policing and many other economic and social burdens, cannot be estimated. These burdens comprise a congestion tax, which is borne by every citizen and which increases yearly until it is further augmented by the cost of street widening."

Few Have Definite Plans.
"While about half the cities report planning commissions, very few have taken these commissions and their plans with any degree of seriousness. While about a third of the traffic conditions, very few have used traffic studies in planning street layout, and only about a fifth have any kind of plan for future street development."

"The smaller cities can still prevent the conditions which must otherwise be inevitable, by making full use of the experience gained by the larger cities. It is cheaper and easier to plan than to rebuild, to build than to rebuild. The police officials and their advisors in many of the large cities have used commendable ingenuity and patience in untangling traffic tangles and inventing schemes for preventing them. But the end of such measures is near—what is now needed is engineering ability and not police power. When the cities and their traffic commission begin to find that the traffic problems cannot be solved by putting drivers in jail, they will turn their attention to the streets. We have seen so busy boosting highways to take a man from one city to another that we have given no thought to what happens when he gets there. But now we must add to the slogan of 'Good Roads' one of 'Better Streets.'"

McKinley and Smith in Alphonse-Gaston Roles

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—United States Senator William B. McKinley removed his hat and bowed to his rival for office, Frank L. Smith, at an informal reception at the home of Gov. Len Small here this noon. "You're one man I'll take off my hat to," McKinley said.

"Mine's already off," returned Smith.

They each slapped the other on the back and mingled with the crowd bound for the State Fair, where Governor's Day drew the largest crowd of politicians in years.

A drizzle from Scott Field flew over the fair ground while hand shaking was liveliest.

Funeral Mrs. Buchanan
to be Held Friday P. M.

The funeral of Mrs. Christina Buchanan, former Dixon woman, who passed away early Wednesday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ray Mathis, 1106 W. Fifth street, Rock Falls, will be held at the Mathis home at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, the Methodist minister of that city officiating. The body will be brought to Dixon for burial in Oakwood cemetery and short services will be held at the grave, at which the casket will be opened that Dixon friends may see her for the last time.

Gov. Small is Swamped by His Friends at Fair

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Responding to Governor Small's personal invitation, nearly two hundred senators and representatives of the 54th general assembly gathered here today as his guests at the Governor's Day at the State Fair.

Both democrats and republicans received the invitations and they responded in sufficient numbers to do business as a legislature. It was the first time, at least in the memory of the older employees at the state house, that a quorum of both houses has gathered here between sessions.

They came so early that the Governor found himself swamped when it came to transporting them from the executive mansion to the fair grounds, and he was forced to send out an appeal to Springfield friends to help him with their automobiles. One hundred Knox County republicans added to the crowd, gathering about their chief townsmen, State Treasurer O. N. Custer.

BIDS ON ASHTON
CHURCH TURNED DOWN BY BOARDToo High; Church to Build Under Committee Orders

Three bids were received last week for the construction of the new Lutheran church in Ashton and after canvassing the situation carefully the bids were all rejected, and it was decided to go ahead and erect the church under the direction of the building committee.

The bids for the church, including the cost of the brick which were to be furnished, made the cost about $40,000.00. As the membership have already done the excavating, and built the foundation, worth several thousand dollars, the committee felt that the work could be done much more cheaply under their own direction.

The church will be constructed of tile and brick, and a carload of tile was unloaded Wednesday for the new building. Bricks are expected to arrive any day. There will be the greater part of two months of building weather yet, and it is hoped that it will continue favorable, and make it possible to get a great amount of the work done before bad weather sets in.

The work of the church will be under the supervision of Mr. McGee, a prominent contractor from Mount Morris.

Prominent Men to Talk

Prohibition Question
Chicago, Sept. 24.—(AP)—What needs to be done about prohibition? That question, the Anti-Saloon League of America announced today, will be discussed at the league's convention here Nov. 5 to 10 by U. S. Senator William B. McKinley and Congressman-at-Large Henry H. Rathbone of Illinois; U. S. Dist. Attorney Olson of Chicago and State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county.

They have accepted an invitation to officials in various departments of government involved in the dry law enforcement work and each will be asked frankly to point out any weakness in the law or its administration. Other representatives of government departments also are expected to speak.

Superintendents of the Anti-Saloon League in every state, in the District of Columbia and Hawaii have been asked to report on prohibition enforcement.

Both Candidates for Senator Attend Fair

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Politicians, especially republicans, who gathered at the Illinois State fair this morning had a delicate question in mind, when they noted the fact that both United States W. B. McKinley and Frank Smith of Dwight, a contender for his seat, would accompany Governor Len Small to the fair.

Much sympathy is expressed for the governor. It is known that Frank Smith, who was appointed chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission by Governor Small, and his leaders, after the governor's endorsement, but Senator McKinley and his leaders are confident that it will not be forthcoming and that the Governor will remain strictly neutral.

Governor Small, it is said, holds to the belief that he has nothing to gain by deciding between the two candidates.

Dixon Man is Under Arrest in Springfield

Deputies from the sheriff's office left this morning for Springfield, where Ogden A. Moore of this city is under arrest and being held at the detective bureau. Moore is charged with issuing worthless checks in several Illinois cities, it is said.

PROTESTS GIVING
FRANCE DELAY AS LONG AS SHE WARSGov. Blaine of Wisconsin
Wires Protest to Coolidge

Madison, Wis., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Gov. Blaine of Wisconsin today made public a telegram he sent to President Coolidge declaring that before conversations are entered upon with France on settlement of the war debt, America should demand "a halt in this ruthless warfare" between the French and Rifians in Morocco. The text of the telegram follows:

"Caillaux, French finance minister, larded in America today seeking extension of time of payment of French debt due America and reduction of interest thereon. A few days ago press dispatches carried the news that France had sent a fleet of 160 airplanes to fight the Rifians in Morocco, and France boasted that each airplane dropped two tons of high explosives on the homes of Moroccans, killing defenseless men, women and children."

"France is engaged in a competitive undertaking in building larger armies and navies and extending her territorial in the exploitation of weaker and smaller nations. The ruthless warfare France is making on the mountain folk of Morocco, in the killing of non-combatants and women and children, is nothing short of barbarism. Before conversations are entered upon with France on the debt settlement, America should demand a halt in this ruthless warfare. Before any other foreign government, America should demand that they cease building larger armies and navies and cease their warfare on smaller and weaker peoples."

"To advance the time of payment of America's debt owing by France, as was done in the case of Great Britain, means that the American taxpayer is to be burdened for the benefit of foreign governments in the pursuit of war and exploitation. In the name of humanity I protest the settlement for foreign debts until America has assured that American dollars will not be used for more war and the murdering of helpless, defenseless women and children."

Truth of Confessions of Murder up to Jury

Marion, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The jury trying them for poison murder must decide whether confessions signed by Robert Tate and his wife Ruby, that they caused the death of Joseph Herrington, her first husband, are true. This was the ruling of Circuit Judge Hartwell here yesterday when he admitted the statements as evidence.

Immediately the defense renewed its fight to prove the confessions were obtained under threats and undue influence.

Stating that the confessions were admissible as evidence if obtained under duress, Judge Hartwell told Mrs. Tate:

"If you did not make a confession there was no influence used to make you confess."

She finally told the judge she was forced to make it. About two hours previously Tate had admitted confessing under similar circumstances. The jury then was recalled after being excluded from the court room during almost two days of argument over the admissibility of the confessions.

Maharaja of Wealthy
India Province Dead

London, Sept. 24.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Lahore reports the death of Lieut. General Sir Pratap Singh, the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir.

The heir to the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir is his nephew, Sir Hari Singh, who achieved international notoriety last winter as the "Mr. A." whose intimacy with Mrs. Charles E. Robinson resulted in his being mulct-ed by a band of international blackmailers. Sir Hari was said to have been forced out of $750,000.

Interviewed regarding rumors that the case might affect Hari's succession to the throne of Jammu and Kashmir, the Maharaja last January stated that "the question has not arisen."

Jammu and Kashmir is one of the richest provinces in India and yields a revenue to its sovereign of about $6,000,000 a year.

Continue Hunt for Slayer of Officers

Tolucac, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Fulton county authorities today are continuing the search for Joseph Stemas, man killer, in the belief that the man is in their county, headed for the home of a brother living near Cuba.

Marcel Clement, employee of the state hospital at Bartonville, notified the sheriff's office here last night that he was stopped on the hard road near Bartonville by two men, one of whom was dressed as a woman. The pair asked for money and said they were on their way to Canton. One of the men, the one dressed in men's clothing, resembled the hunted slayer, Clement stated.

Calves in 4 Years

AUTO ACCIDENT
FATAL TO DIXON
MAN IN N. DAKOTARalph Bowser Fatally
Injured in Mishap
Last Saturday

Ralph Bowser of this city passed away at a hospital in Harrington, N. D., at 7:10 o'clock Wednesday evening as the result of injuries he received when his automobile ran into a ditch Saturday, turning over on its side. Word of his death was received last evening.

Accompanied by Frank Sheeley, also of this city, Mr. Bowser left in June to work in the harvest fields of Kansas, from which place they recently went to North Dakota. He was engaged in running an engine on a farm near Harrington and Saturday afternoon, as the men were not threshing, he drove out to the farm to work on the engine. Returning to town he lost control of his car and it ran into a ditch, crushing him beneath it. His back was injured severely, causing paralysis of the lower part of his body, and death relieved his sufferings last evening.

The body will be taken direct from Harrington to Nokomis, Ill., his former home, for burial. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Malinda Bowser of Nokomis; five sisters, Mrs. Ida Tetrick and Mrs. Catherine Cortright of Dixon, Mrs. John Tannan of St. Louis, Mrs. Leslie Herron of Litchfield, Ill., and two brothers, P. C. Bowser of Dixon and Logan Bowser of Litchfield.

Conspiracy Trial May Reach Jury on Friday

Woodstock, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The defense in the trial of County Judge Charles Barnes and former State's Attorney B. S. Lumley rested its case shortly before 11 a. m., today, with prospects that before the afternoon session and the case reach the jury some time tomorrow. The defendants are charged with conspiracy and subordination of perjury.

The charges against the judge and former state's attorney grew out of the prosecution and conviction on fraud charges of Fremont Hoy, veteran McHenry county banker, and his son, Clarence, two years ago. Judge Barnes in connection with that case, represented Samuel and Clifford Wilson, who had purchased notes and trust deeds from Hoy which Truman Abbott had deposited in the bank and which Abbott alleged he had not authorized the Hoy's to sell.

Presbyterians' Peace
Commission in Session

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 24.—(AP)—The peace commission of the Presbyterian church entered on its final labors behind closed doors today with the promise of making public a presentation for general circulation regarding its activities here since Tuesday.

Most important of five sub-committees on church problems is the one which will deal with "causes of unrest and possibilities of relief," for the peace commission was ordered by the last general assembly to inquire into the spiritual condition of the church and the causes making for unrest. Commission members have admitted that one of the chief causes for unrest has been the doctrinal dispute between the fundamentalists and modernists.

May Ask Williams to
"Spiritualize" Chicago

Chicago, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Howard S. Williams, the evangelist credited with the conversion of Herrin to a "peaceable, God-fearing" community, may be asked to attempt to spiritualize Chicago's vice centers, it was disclosed today. Herrin is in "bloody Williamson County," Illinois, where the riots occurred in 1922.

Rev. John Meeker, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Herrin, in an address before the union ministers meeting next Monday, will speak on the topic "The Miracle at Herrin."

K. P. TO ROCKFORD
Joliet, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Rockford was awarded the 1926 convention of the Knights of Pythias, domain of Illinois, at the closing session of the convocation here this afternoon. GRAND JURY
URGES SUCH
LEGAL STEPEleven Indictments are Returned by Jurors
Wednesday P. M.

The grand jury completed its investigations yesterday afternoon and reported to Judge Harry Edwards in the circuit court, returning a list of eleven indictments as follows:

Michael Makinowicz and Walter Smith, murder.

Harry Delaney and Robert Dillon—confidence game.

Curtis Cooley—larceny.

Frank Catalina—violation of prohibition laws, second offense.

Constantin Gredinar—violation of prohibition laws, second offense.

Lemuel B. Searis—violation of prohibition laws, second offense.

Charles Bush and Frank Abraham—larceny of an automobile.

Carl Teschenoff—conveying personal property to defraud creditors.

Frank Stiles and Delavan Reynolds—burglary and larceny.

Ben Hasselton—larceny.

Mary Catalina—possession and selling of intoxicating liquors.

The grand jury in the cases of Frank Catalina and Constantin Gredinar, who is also known as "Black Joe," both aliens, recommended the deportation of both defendants to their native countries. In both instances the parties are said to have been the most flagrant violators of the prohibition laws in Lee county.

The inquest jury met Monday and organized, starting their investigations which continued through until almost 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Judge Edwards discharged the body for the term.

Catalina Back in Jail.

Catalina with his attorney appeared in court before Judge Edwards this morning, having been summoned for the purpose of showing why the defendant should not be sent to the county jail in default of the payment of a fine of $500 and costs. City Attorney E. E. Winger appeared for the prosecution and the court ruled that Catalina be remanded to the county jail, where he was taken by a deputy.

In the meantime Catalina was informed that he had been indicted by the grand jury and was held under bonds of $2,000 on a charge of possessing and selling intoxicating liquors.

When informed that the grand jury had recommended his being deported, Catalina was not surprised and added that he did not care what they did as long as he was not sentenced to hang.

TWO NEGROES SENTENCED

James "Gig Jim" Lee, colored, who has been a prisoner in the Lee county jail since last February, was taken in the circuit court this morning. By agreement, the charge of assault with intent to kill was nolle prossed and Lee was sent back to the county jail for a period of 90 days on a plea of guilty to a charge of assault.

Curtis Cooley, colored, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of larceny of an automobile, and was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term of from one to ten years in the Pontiac state reformatory.

New Low Prices in Grain for the Year

Chicago, Sept. 24.—(AP)—In every grain pit on the Chicago Board of Trade, new low-price records for 1925 were chalked down today. General selling on the part of owners was the rule and the consequent fall in values led into operation many standing orders to stop losses at various pre-arranged limits.

At the extreme bottom figures of the day wheat for May here was as much as 6½¢ a bushel under yesterday's finish. The market, however, rallied in the final 15 minutes of trading and the close was at net losses of 2½¢ to 4½¢ with December delivery quoted at 1.44½¢ and May 1.46½¢.

Commerce Commission

BULLETIN

DEPEW TO GET SENTENCE FOR MURDER TODAY

Cambridge, Ill., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Judge N. A. Larson of Moline, will pass sentence at 2 o'clock this afternoon on Perry Depew, 32 of Kewanee, formerly of Lee Center, who pleaded guilty to the charge of murdering Mrs. Pearl Hixson, his former sweetheart, in Kewanee, June 20 last. In his closing argument yesterday in Henry County circuit court, here, State's Attorney Carl Melin charged the shooting was a cold-blooded premeditated murder and demanded the death penalty. Counsel for the defense based their plea for mercy on the alleged derangement of Depew's mind.

STATE'S ATTORNEY
SUBMITS HIS TERM
REPORT TO COURT$3298 in Fines Collected
Through Office Since
April 11th

State's Attorney Mark C. Keller filed his regular term report with Judge Harry Edwards in the circuit court late yesterday afternoon, the report being approved by the court.

The report shows during the period from April 11 to Sept. 21, fines collected amounting to $2,928.50 and fees in the sum of $370, making a total of $3,298.50. Upon further examination of the report it was shown that fines and fees were collected in 81 cases, which were tried and disposed of during that time.

The number of criminal cases actually disposed of was substantially in excess of 81, there being a large number in which the defendant was fined and upon failure to pay the fine was committed to the county jail, sentenced to jail in the first instance, or paroled.

The statutes provide that every dollar collected by the state's attorney shall be paid over to the county treasurer with specific provision for certain particular fines to be paid, as in the case of the violation of the motor vehicle law, to the treasurer of the township where the violation was committed. At any rate it will be seen from this report that these earnings of the state's attorney's office in every instance, reach the taxpayer's pocket and relieve him, as in the case of the report, of the burden of $3,298.50 in taxes.

New Phase of Air
Hearing on Monday

Washington, Sept. 24.—(AP)—With its preliminary survey of the military and postal air service completed, hearings before the president's air board were in suspension today until Monday when the next phase of the inquiry will open with the testimony of air pilots.

Col. William Mitchell, whose advocacy of a unified air service under a department of national defense found support in the views presented to the board by Major General Patrick, chief of the army air service, is one of the fliers to be heard. The former assistant army air chief, whose most recent attack on the army and navy air service administrations revived a controversy that largely brought about the present inquiry, is expected to appear before the board on Tuesday.

New Assistant Priest
at St. Patrick's Now

Rev. Fr. Ambrose Wiedekamp of Brooklyn, N. Y., who for the past year has been assistant priest at Tampico, Ill., has been transferred to Dixon to assist Rev. Fr. Michael Foley of St. Patrick's church. Rev. Fr. SHENANDOAH'S
WRECKAGE SEEN
BY NAVY COURTNo Evidence Heard as Members Study Parts of Big Ship

BULLETIN

Lakehurst, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Shenandoah fought the line squal in Ohio on Sept. 3, for at least half an hour before she broke up, the barograph instrument record introduced today before the naval court of inquiry shows.

This record establishes that the ship began its first rapid ascent at 4:26 a. m., central time, rising from an altitude of 1850 feet to an altitude of 2,980 feet in 8 minutes.

The craft then leveled off, but two minutes later, at 4:36, she shot up almost like a rocket from 3,015 feet to 6,065 in approximately ten minutes.

Her ascent halted at this altitude at 4:46 a. m. She then fell abruptly 1,745 feet in three minutes bringing up at an altitude of 4,280 feet.

At this point the barograph ceased to function, consequently Lt. C. H. Havill, introduced as an expert, said it was his judgment that it ceased as a result of the instrument itself receiving a violent bump or else the whole control car in which it was located received such a bump.

There were blotches on the record made of the same ink as that in the barograph but, it was not possible for the officers accurately to interpret the blotches.

Whether the barograph ceased to function when the control car broke off the ship could not be determined.

Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Wreckage of the airship Shenandoah was inspected by the naval court of inquiry here today, so that the members might form a clearer idea from the testimony of survivors as to just what happened within the big ship when she broke up in a storm over Ohio, Sept. 3, with a loss of 14 officers and men.

Survivors explained to the court details regarding the ship's construction and the function of the various pieces of wreckage which had been laid out on the floor of the hangar here in the relative position in which it was in the original hull.

The inspection consumed virtually all of the morning and there was no taking of evidence. Later in the day the barograph record, showing exactly how the ship was bumped about in the storm, was to be presented to the court to amplify the testimony of the crew to the ship's position when the breakup came.

QUICK AGREEMENT
IN DEBT PARLEY
IS DESIRE OF ALLCommissioners Pledged to Face Issue as Practical Men

BULLETIN

Washington, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Documents which in effect constitute a French offer for settlement of that nation's $4,000,000,000 debt to the United States, were submitted to the American debt commission today at the first meeting between the French and American negotiators.

Although the character of the proposal was not made public, it was established that to at least some members of the American commission, it was not acceptable as drawn.

Washington, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The French and American debt commissioners, meeting here today to effect a settlement of France's $4,000,000,000 war debt, pledged themselves to face the issue as practical men, recognizing the problems of each other and desirous of reaching a quick agreement.

France's position, stated by her minister of finance, Joseph Caillaux, was that his country has not forgotten "what we owe to America for her splendid work to end victoriously the war and for the generous help our people received from citizens of the United States."

Secretary Mellon, head of the American debt commission, declared he recognized the influence the present conference may have on the peace of the world and described the American desire and duty as one in the direction of a settlement that would be fair to all, and "in the practical test of time, workable."

M. Caillaux spoke briefly explaining that the hope of the French was to reach a settlement that would not only be practicable, insofar as material interests are concerned, but one that would be "worthy of the past of the two great nations."

He said the discussions between the two commissions should go forward in such a way as "to fortify peace and help the economic stabilization in the world."

The joint session today was comparatively brief, lasting only a little more than an hour.

IT IS TO LAUGH—

By Hal Cochran.

The world knows a wee bit of joke now and then, that brings forth a good round of laughter, can do heaps of good for the finest of men and furnish a chuckle thereafter.

Quite wise is the man who goes out of his way to keep people happy and cheerful. He spreads bits of humor when folks come his way. They laugh when he gives them an awful.

It's always been easy to find types of folks who shun at the side that's the brighter. They'll tell you their troubles, instead of good jokes that makes your own troubles seem lighter.

The world, after all, is the way that you make it. You always can frown or just smile. The best side is waiting; let's all laugh and take it. The effort is really worth while.

IF EUROPE PAYS, THAT'S A PEACE PACT.

Finance Minister Caillaux of France is in this country ready to enter debt negotiations with Secretary Mellon and our debt commissioners. It is said he is ready to offer substantial payments beginning as early as next year. Whether he will meet the views of our debt commissioners and of congress regarding the principal of the debt, the rate of interest, and the number of years the payments are to run, is another matter.

It is hoped that he will be able to do so, and that he will be met by the most liberal spirit consistent with negotiations yet to be made with Italy and other nations, and with respect to the settlement already made with England. It is admitted on all sides that France was the greatest sufferer from the World War, but we can hardly afford to make concessions to France on that score that might cause Great Britain to call for a reopening of the question of her debt and the liquidation of it. Of course that is a close matter, and in the eyes of the business world Britain would have no cause to ask for a reconsideration if we should make greater concessions to France. But it is felt that we should not strain the friendly relations existing between this country and Great Britain.

It is at all events gratifying that France is ready to negotiate, and that Italy promises to do likewise before the next session of our congress in December. It bespeaks a more buoyant feeling in Europe. And all the advice confirms the opinion that the countries over there are making much quicker progress toward recovery from the effects of the war than was believed possible.

If the readiness of France and Italy to negotiate brings about tangible results such as to be approved by congress at its coming session, this will be a step in progress that will be far more important toward the preservation of world peace than the pact that is now in negotiation between Britain, France and Germany. As an individual's real financial status depends on his decision and determination to pay his debts, so it is with nations.

The people of Europe can much better afford to pay taxes to pay the debts of their nations than they can afford to pay as much or more taxes to finance greater war preparation. Something like two-thirds of a century devoted to paying their debts should mean two-thirds of a century of peace. Can any peace pact between the principal nations over there do better than that? The sooner the diplomats of France, Germany, England and Italy and the Balkan states ask themselves this question and answer it honestly, the nearer will they bring peace in Europe.

It is true that the United States suffered least from the war. Not many Europeans figure that her remoteness from the scene of hostilities justified this. Our entry into the conflict was purely voluntary. We did not have to enter the war at all and probably would not have done so except for the insolence of Germany toward us and her refusal to respect the right of our citizens.

And for the years since the war, American taxpayers have been carrying the load of the billions loaned to Europe in her time of need. America is the richest of the nations, mainly because she has not been in the almost continuous state of warfare in which Europe has indulged. It is the American taxpayer's legal and moral right that a time be set for the repayment of the billions he so generously lent to Europe. And such repayment would mean a long era of peace and recuperation for Europe and the world.

THE CYCLING TOURIST.

It sounds like old times to hear that E. D. Bower of Olympia, Wash., is touring the country on a bicycle and has already covered more than 7000 miles in a little over 100 days.

Mr. Bower is 66 years old. He is not doing it on a bet, but for pleasure. He prefers to travel that way, he says, because he can see more. Twenty-five years ago he made a similar tour of Europe, and enjoyed it so much that he has always wanted to see America in the same way. In another quarter of a century, he says, he may cycle through Europe again.

Undoubtedly he can see more from his bicycle than the usual tourist does from his fleeting automobile. It is easier riding, too, than it used to be in the good old days of dirt roads and steep grades. Only, there is one danger that was unknown in the era of cyclist touring clubs. The humble cyclist pedalling along the highway today is likely at any moment to be "bumped off" in more senses than one.

Saklatvala has achieved what was probably his chief end—the securing of wide publicity. Secretary Kellogg, if he really wanted to peeve him, would have let him come on in, instead of barring him. Saklatvala's own brother, P. D. Saklatvala, president of the Middle States Oil company, living in New York, says Shapurji is a destructive genius, but he does not take him seriously. Shapurji he says was always eager for publicity.

Waterloo in Iowa seems to need a Wellington. The killing of Mrs. Cook, evidently on account of her work for prohibition enforcement, is followed by another murder, Albert Haskie, aged 35, alleged bootlegger, falling at the hands of other bootleggers.

The secret of radio howling has been discovered. Not by a scientist, either, but by a plain father. Radio, he explains, is in its infancy.

BY CHESTER H. ROWELL.

If you are still interested in evolution, think of this: Only two explanations have ever been offered of the fact that the earth is inhabited by many kinds of creatures.

One is evolution.

The other is special creation.

By the one explanation, God first created each species separately, and then destroyed most of them and created others.

Nearly all the species that ever lived on earth are now extinct. Through millions of years they have followed each other in a constantly growing order.

Each kind lived for a time, and then gave way to another kind, slightly different.

This part is not "theory." It is fact. The explanation of it is theory.

One theory is that God destroyed each kind, leaving it no descendants, and then created another, having no ancestors, and that he kept it up, species after species, for countless ages.

The other is that life from the beginning was endowed with the power of variation, and that all the creatures inhabiting the earth at any particular time are descended from those which inhabited it before, those surviving which varied in the manner to be adapted to the new conditions, and those that did not vary, or varied in the other direction, perishing.

You may debate these two theories, to explain the facts, but the facts themselves are beyond debate.

A Difference in Salaries

Robert T. Kane, moving picture producer, offers some American university $5000 a year to hire a professor to teach young men to earn $50,000 a year in the movies.

One wonders, if any university can find a man for the job, how long it can keep him at that salary.

There is, of course, more cynicism than truth in the saying "those that can do, those that can't teach."

Plenty of men teach who can also do, and accept much less for teaching than they could get for doing. But the difference between $5000 and $50,000 rather stretches the limit.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Olive Roberts Barton
NO. 4—THE BAD GAZOOKUMS MAKES TROUBLE

So he got out and lifted up the side of the hood and looked at the engine.

The next time Grubby Woodchuck came to the filling station where the Twins sold gasoline, Grubby said, "I want some good, fast gasoline. Mister Nick the fastest high powered gasoline you have—about 70-75?"

Which, my dears, is very high indeed. Only I haven't the least idea what it means. But if you ever see numbers like that on a gasoline pump, it means something very extra.

Nick hadn't forgotten the visit that Grubby's daddy had paid him the very morning, and how worried he was about his son's speeding.

"All right, Grubby, I'll give you the fastest gasoline I have," said Nick. But all the time he was saying to himself, "I'll give him the gasoline, but I'll fix him so he can't go so very fast. I'll pretend I'm fixing something else, but I'll turn the timer back."

If you don't know, I'll tell you that the timer is the thing on a car that regulates its speed. It can be fixed so that a car cannot go fast at all.

So when Nick filled up the tank on Grubby's car, or rather his father's car, he did something to the timer, and away started Grubby.

"For the land's sake!" cried the little woodchuck boy. "This car isn't going any faster than a garbage wagon! What can be the matter?"

He got out and lifted up the side of the hood and looked in at the engine. He examined it carefully all over. But not a thing could he see that was wrong.

"Let me look at it," said a voice just then.

And didn't a bad little gazookum step up right beside Grubby's automobile and start to pound at it and shake it and do everything to it a gazookum can possibly do.

A gazookum, since you are asking,

SANITATION PAYS IN RAISING HOGS

Recent Tour Proves Value of System Advocated

Oregon—Seeing is believing. The forty men who attended one or more of the Farm Bureau demonstration meetings in connection with the Swine Sanitation Tour in Ogle County on last Friday are every one convinced that the system of swine sanitation recommended by the Farm Bureau pays.

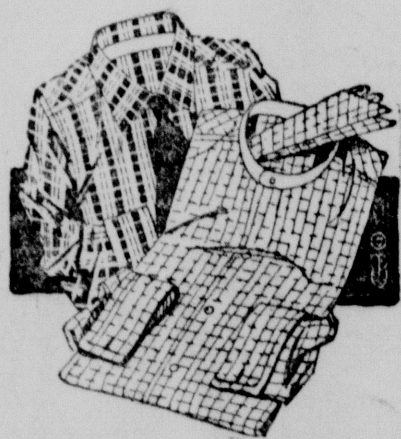

It was the testimony of every one of the cooperators in this project that he had raised better pigs from fewer sows by following this system than he had ever been able to do before.

This project has proven to be one of the most practical and financially beneficial projects that the Farm Bureau has undertaken for it gives every farmer who is willing to take advantage of it an opportunity to make more profit from his hogs. Fewer losses, earlier maturing pigs, more pigs from the same number of sows, and lower cost of production of pork are some of the advantages that were named for the system by those who are practicing it.

Nine stops were made Friday on the Swine Sanitation Tour at places where farmers had been using this method of hog management recommended by the Farm Bureau.

Dr. Ruffensberger, federal veterinarian, who was responsible for the starting of this method of hog management and who is now in charge of the laboratory in Chicago for investigation of work in swine diseases, was present and spoke at two of the meetings.

Prof. Robbins of the Animal Husbandry Department of the University of Illinois was also present and told of the experiences that other farmers were having with this system and of the general satisfaction throughout the state which he had found. In answer to the question "Would not this system tend to over supply the hog market by raising more pigs?" Prof. Robbins answered that the object is not to raise more pigs but to raise better pigs from fewer sows and thus make the cost of raising them less.

County Judge Takes Stand in Own Court

Woodstock, Ill., Sept. 23.—(AP)—County Judge C. P. Barnes, in the courtroom where he often has presided, today sat as a witness in his own day night. The Peorians took with defense. His unimpaired manner contrasted somewhat with that of V. S. Lumley, three state's attorney of Mc Henry county. Barnes and Lumley are co-defendants charged with subornation of perjury and conspiracy to send to prison Fremont Hoy and his son Clarence, bankers now serving a sentence at Joliet penitentiary.

The defense must complete its testimony today. Judge E. D. Reynolds of Rockford has ruled. Lumley testified yesterday.

Answering charges that he had split a fee, Barnes said he had suggested that his clients, Samuel and Clifford A. suit involving a transaction with Wilson, McHenry county farmers, in the bankers, contribute toward the expenses of Lumley's client, Truman A. Abbott, 70 year old retired farmer, who was the chief complainant against the Hoyes.

Lumley, Barnes testified, deliberately said he thought that morally, the Wilsons ought to pay something toward the expenses of "poor old Del Abbott."

Rumaging in a stack of files, the witness produced a letter to show that conferences he had had with Fremont Hoy before the latter was tried, were approved by Hoy's counsel.

THINK HARBER GOT OUT OF IOWA IN A BOAT FRIDAY MORN

Waterloo Death Car is Thought Stored in Clinton Garage

Clinton, Ia.—Is Malcolm Harber's car stored in a private garage in this city?

Did Harber and a companion cross the Mississippi river north of Lyons in a row boat early last Friday morning, the morning after the murder of Albert Hertske, while two other members of the party crossed the Lyons bridge in a Ford car?

A Clinton man who is close to rum-running sources told a newspaper representative today that both of these questions may be answered in the affirmative.

In support of his statements he points to the fact that Jack Corey, rival bootleg king of Harber's, and Phil Kline, Corey's lieutenant, were in Clinton Monday night, supposedly on the trail of Harber whom they believe to be in hiding somewhere in this vicinity.

Corey and Kline, as a matter of fact, were in Clinton Monday night. They came to the city late in the afternoon, and registered at the Lafayette hotel. They left the city during the night or early Tuesday.

Corey is the Waterloo man supposed to be "marked for death" by members of Harber's band.

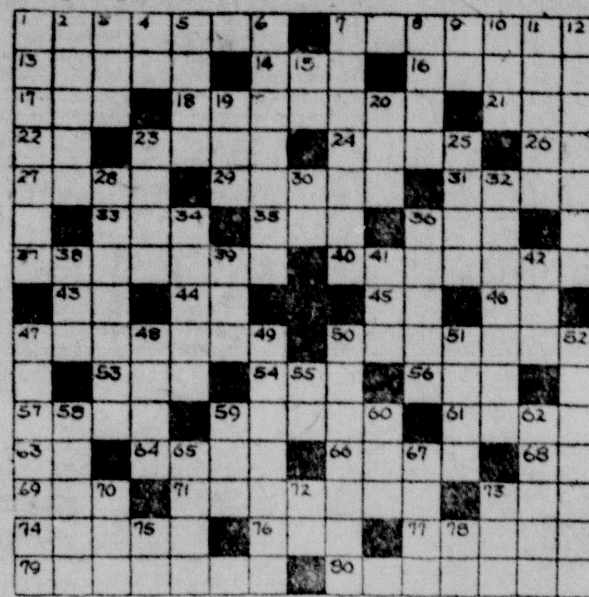

According to the Clinton man's theory Harber and three companions arrived here early last Friday morning in the green Cadillac coupe which figured in the Waterloo murder. They are supposed to have stored the coupe in a private garage here. The situation of this garage is said to be known by at least one Clinton bootlegger, known to be an enemy of Harber's.

The fugitives from Waterloo apparently had friends waiting here to facilitate their flight across the river. They furnished them with a Ford coupe in which two crossed the bridge while Harber and another of the quartet rowed across above Lyons. Supposedly the party came together again in Illinois and either went on to Sterling, Chicago or some other point, or went into hiding on the Illinois side of the Mississippi.

According to the same source of information, one of the party from Waterloo visited the home of a well-known local rum-runner and tried to borrow a sawed-off shotgun to carry in the Ford.

Why Consider a Lesser Car?
It Has Beauty—Performance—Super-Six Smoothness
—Economy and Endurance

This is the greatest Essex value in history. It is the finest Essex ever built. The price is the lowest at which Essex ever sold. The largest production of 6-cylinder cars in the world, giving economies in purchase of materials, manufacture and distribution exclusive to that position, make this value possible alone to Hudson-Essex.

The new low price places it within the reach of all, and it has the brilliant performance, reliability, riding ease and fine appearance for which Essex is famous. No wonder everyone is saying these things about Essex.

PIRATES CINCHED PENNANT, GIANTS DROPPED COUPLE

Washington Can Grab Rag in American League Today

New York, Sept. 24—(AP)—The National League pennant race is over, with the bunting nailed firmly to the Pirates mast. Washington could settle the American League controversy today if it should win its double bill from the Indians and the Athletics should bow to the Browns.

Pittsburgh had been chasing the championship for 16 years without success. Manager McKee, his assistants and players were given an ovation by fans who swarmed the field yesterday after the Corsairs defeated the Phillies 2-1.

Roger Peckinpaugh, Washington shortstop, has been chosen as the American League's most valuable player in 1925 by a committee composed of one veteran baseball writer in each city of the circuit. He received 45 points out of a possible 64. Al Simmons of the Athletics was given the next best rating with 41 points.

The Giants concluded their appearance at St. Louis by taking a double trouncing from the Cardinals, 8-0 and 8-2. Sotthorn blanked the New Yorkers in the first fray. The second game was called after six innings to allow the Giants to catch a train.

Chicago took a final game of a series from Brooklyn 2-1. The Robins have lost ten straight. The victory gave the Cubs an even break in the 22 games played this year with Brooklyn.

The Braves annexed both sections of a double header from the Reds 6-1 and 2-1, the last encounter going 12 innings.

While the Senators were without a game due to cold weather, the Mackmen whipped the Browns twice, 6-3 and 7-3, cutting Washington's lead to seven and one half games. Hale's circuit smash with two on, saved up the first game, while homers by Welch and Holt in the fifth inning decided the second fracas.

Garland Braxton, recruit from the Springfield, Eastern League club pitched his first game for the Yanks and defeated the White Sox, 7-6.

Detroit topped the Red Sox 15-1. Fred Haney third sacker for the Tigers, sustained a slight concussion of the brain after being hit by a pitched ball by Howard Ehmke in the fourth inning and was taken to a hospital.

The Reds were unable to do much with Cooney who let them down with eight scattered hits.

Babe Ruth's batting proved a factor in beating the White Sox. He drove in four runs and scored one himself. He cleaned the bases with a double in one inning which put the Yanks in front.

SECRET PRACTICE CONTINUES IN ALL BIG TEN COLLEGES

Coaches Getting Ready to Use Pruning Knife on Their Squads

Chicago, Sept. 24—(AP)—Secret practice in which coaches are whetting pruning knives to use on below par material are the order of the day on mid-west football fields.

Search for a running mate for Roger Weller, Minnesota end, occupies Coach Spears. His latest experiment is a trial of Captain Herman Ancher, half back, at right end, while wing candidates are getting intensive drill in catching passes and breaking up plays.

The line is a source of concern at Purdue, where "Whitey" Mieran, regular guard last season, is lost to the squad with a wrenched knee. Cunningham and Deephouse, veterans are fighting it out for Mieran's position, with Anderson, 1923 letter man holding the other guard job.

Michigan plays are being dished up to Indiana's varsity which engages the Wolverine in its Western Conference opener. George and Walter Fisher, tackles, Bernoske and Bishop, guards and Kelso, center, are filling the first squad line.

The Yostmen, meanwhile, are more concerned with their opener next week with Michigan State. Much reserve strength is developing, but shifts are necessary as a result of injuries to Victor Dumhoff, slated to call signals in the curtain raiser. Broken leg ligaments may keep him out for the season. Friedman has been shifted from half to quarter to take his place.

Despite absence of seven hopefuls because of injuries, Ohio State's stiff performers to the top. Among these are Wendler, open field runner and Karrow, plunger and tackler.

Iowa's present problem seems development of a stronger defense. The seconds are cutting through with a strong running attack featuring Babs Cuhel. An air offensive with Kutsch doing most of the tossing is being stressed.

If Senator Hiram Johnson had a prominent wife he couldn't keep any stiller. "You bet I'm going to dance tonight. We're only young twice, you know," I heard Mort Pine, fifty, say today.

Conference's outstanding star last year, is the center of Coach Zuppke's efforts to develop a blocking game in the interference as well as in the line. It's objective is to duplicate the offensive of last year when behind the successful blocking interference of Britton and McIlwain, Grange made his sensational runs.

Fourteen Rodgers sport jerseys awarded in recognition of meritorious work in practice, the presentations being considered as similar to naming a first squad. They are Captain Polaski, Larson, Curtis, Nelson, Long, Crofoot, Spies, Sanger, Wilson, McAndrews, Harmon, Kreuze, Sipek and Huegge.

Bill Christman, last year Purple quarter, is in the line at end in Northwestern's practice sessions.

Coach Stagg at Chicago is emphasizing drop and place kicking as the lot of Curley, McDonough, McCarty, Abbott, Rouse and McKinney.

With two more days of rehearsal before the Baylor game, Notre Dame is giving attention to kicking. Rockne is combing his prospective punters for one or two men who will feature the booting department in the initial combat. Practice shows his first stringers better on defense than offense.

"THE LIMITED MAIL" by Monte Blue, is a pictorialization of this story by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Bob, a young tramp, saved the Limited when it was about to crash into a boulder on a trestle, and now is in the mail car on the way to Crater City, helping Jim Fowler, the clerk, to rearrange letters which had been disarranged when the train came to its sudden stop. He finds a letter addressed to himself at the Salt Lake City hotel where he had made his decision to cast loose. It is in "her" writing, but he resists the temptation to open it and it is cast into the "Dead Letter" compartment.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"Just past midnight," said Jim presently, consulting his watch for perhaps the fortieth time within four minutes, an increase of his nervousness betrayed by his bungling aim. "Today is the fifth anniversary of our marriage." His eyes, veiled with the ardent mist of utter worship, gleamed brightly in the compressed light of the lurching mail car as he gazed steadily upon his wife's picture. More to air his own inward ecstasies than to enlighten his companion, Jim continued to talk with engaging freedom to Bob as they worked.

"Five years—each one sweeter than the last—" He choked, then recovered a letter from a wrong sack.

Bob felt awkwardly out of place and socially weak in the presence of such devotion. Nevertheless, he experienced a vague feeling of emotional kinship for Jim; reminiscent, though wholly dissimilar, chords were struck in him, stirring up haunting memories that echoed with sweet hollowness in his thoughts, like stray notes fluttering down at evening from high steeple bells.

"Young man," said Smogs, "the kind passengers have taken up a collection."

"Don't care so much for myself," Jim was saying, "not that I don't like babies well enough—but My Dearest means more to me than any baby possibly could. Still, it will make her happiness complete. She wanted a baby. So I'm glad, for her sake—only I—wish it were over."

Bob had not the least idea of what to say in answer; so he compromised with a sympathetic nod, and was relieved a moment later when the Limited slithered to a stop in the Crater City station. Jim slid the door open for the relieving clerk and guard, who jumped in cheerily, but stopped in alarm when they saw the odd assortment of hoboes. While the incoming clerk was signing his release order and the registered mail turnover, Jim satisfied him with a hasty explanation. Meantime, Bob and his pals dropped to the wet platform, closely followed by the marine, who, glad that his vigil was over, disappeared efficiently into the night.

Bob had forgotten the conductor's declaration that the passengers intended to make up a purse. But not so his differently-moulded pals, who nudged one another with excited, smacking whispers when they saw Smogs approaching.

The fat conductor was leading gingerly under the meagre shelter of the open-sided train shed a committee of the passengers made up of a saturnine paint drummer, an itinerant parson, and a tourist—no less—in golf stockings, knickers and cap.

In the uncertain light of one of the shed's overhead oil lamps the Committee paused and beckoned to Bob. Spike and Potts hastened to them, grinning, bowing. Bob, who had watched the advent of the Committee with uninterested contempt, remained where he was—just under the mail car door. He intended to wish good-bye and good luck to Jim before slouching off into oblivion once more. Smogs, drawing away distastefully from the two orthodox hoboes, called to Bob to come forward.

Bob paid no attention; so the Committee, virtuously determined not to be cheated out of the satisfaction of appearing magnanimous, after dubiously hesitant glances amongst themselves made the concession of moving to him.

"Young man," said Smogs, "the kind passengers have taken up a collection—in which, ahem, I felt constrained to join—to reward you

Bob looked idly up into the mail car for Jim—
"—and to furnish you with a means of reforming and—" here with a sour look upon Spike, who was edging up and scratching his nose avariciously with his steel claw, and upon Potts, who smirked with ingratiating humility, "—of breaking away from bad companions."

"Bad companions is the cause of many downfalls—" intoned the paint drummer virtuously with an approval-seeking look at the parson, who merely yawned and giggled, however, because at that moment a drop of rain drip bounced on his neck and trickled intimately down inside his mail order union suit.

Smogs proffered the money, only to meet with a curt refusal from Bob. This was a new one in the experience of Smogs and the Committee—a hobo refusing money. But a glance at Potts' face, which had become a sea of sorrow at Bob's unprecedented action, changed Bob's mind. He reached out and plucked the purse from the startled conductor's hand.

"On second thought—" he grinned apologetically, then tossed the purse to Potts. Spike, quick as a famished malamute at a mushing team's feeding time, caught the money and darted off into the gloom. Potts and Bob tore after him, leaving a thoroughly bewildered Committee to disperse at will.

Overtaking Spike at a far corner of the station building, Bob forced him to relinquish the money to Potts. When Bob's attention was distracted by the arrival of Jim on the scene, Spike, adopting new tactics, went off arm in arm with Potts in a most friendly manner—but rather too hurried to be sincere.

"I heard the presentation ceremonies," Jim chuckled. "Glad you took Smogs down a peg. Say Wilson, by the way, you haven't any particular place to spend the night, have you? Then why not come home with me? I'd be very glad to have you—treats are on me tonight, you know!"

Bob declined; it was no time for Jim, he felt, to be dragging a stray tramp into his house. But Jim insisted so good-naturedly that he finally talked down Bob's scruples, and the two strode away from the station up the deserted and storm-swept street of the sleeping town.

Jim set a swift pace, occasionally breaking into a run, in his eagerness to reach the happiness he anticipated at home; and he babbled eagerly in the teeth of the wind.

"Great luck to make a new friend. I'm a bit superstitious, you know—and the luckiest omens have been happening all day. First train we passed was a string of coal empties—greatest luck in the world, any brakie will tell you—found a new penny, too."

He stopped short as he kicked an heavy object that clattered on the cobblestones, then stooped and picked it up.

"Holy Hannah!" he cried jovially, "a horseshoe!"

He fairly raced now, and Bob was hard put to keep pace with him, for their way led uphill and Jim's cottage was a good half-mile from the depot. Jim ascended the four steps of his porch at a single bound and dashed in, calling for Bob to follow.

Oppressed by a strong sense that he was an intruder, Bob hesitated at the open doorway. Finally he overcame his scruples and stepped through, after Jim. He found himself in a little parlor that was furnished in the stodge and sparse manner typical of the mountainous west, observing a curious tableau.

Jim, with the rapt expression of an astronomical explorer discovering a new world, was on tiptoe, smiling into a wriggling bundle in the broad arms of a nurse. Fussing over his medicine case at the table was a grave-faced doctor who had been summoned early that night to attend to Jim's wife.

DECEASED NOT HER SISTER

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 23—(AP)—Mrs. John Last, daughter of H. N. Tabor, former U. S. Senator from Colorado, was more certain than ever today that the woman who died in Chicago recently was not her sister, Mary Echo Tabor.

"I know my mother would be able to decide the matter definitely," Mrs. Last said. "My uncle, Peter McCourt of Denver, in order to stop all this talk about whether the Chicago woman is my sister, waived identification. I am not inclined to do that just to silence talk.

"The Chicago woman was an imposter. Mother said last night at her home in Denver that the woman was an imposter, and that Mary has communicated with her only a day or two ago. That should be sufficient, in addition to the fact that mother has denied the identity of the Chicago woman, is the fact that Mary is only 25 years old whereas the Chicago woman is said to be 45 or 46 years old."

Yes, this is real Heale weather. Any druggist will sell you a box. Price 25 cents.

New York—I saw them sitting on the stone steps of Temple Emanu-El, which reproduces in the very heart of Fifth Avenue the exotic architecture of the Orient—a mother and child. They humped shabbily on the two bottom steps against an incongruous background of rich scroll-work gates. The mother rattled disinterestedly a box of chewing gum. The child played with the box cover.

The mother wore a shabby sweater and a shabby skirt. A good fraction of her gum stock already was in her mouth. It had become a wad of uncomfortable size, like a huge gum drop in the face of a child. It gave the effect of mild mumps as she transferred it from cheek to cheek. The child appeared well fed and pawed at the box cover with that impersonality to be found only in young children.

Meanwhile smart Fifth Avenue swept by. In and out of the smart shops of that section the crowds moved. Wise young maids with generous men; women in limousines or taxis; casual window shoppers—all of the people that go to make up Fifth Avenue in mid-afternoon passed the mother and child as she shook listlessly the little box of gum.

Fifth Avenue doesn't chew gum. Or if it does it is not in public. And so the endless stream of well dressed women just gaped—even as the woman upon the temple stairs gaped. Lack. The gum seller, however gaped with a dumb tiredness, as though the picture of splendor was fenced off. The passers gaped with a certain disturbed annoyance.

I could detect slight shudders here and there as the great egg of gum nipped first one cheek and then the other. For some time I watched. I saw no one so much as drop a coin. Had she taken her seat on almost any of the elevated stairways she would long since have taken pity pennies from scores.

Not that Fifth Avenue is hard hearted. But even its charity must conform with certain set conventions and gum chewing charity is not to be condoned. The beggar woman was practicing bad beggar etiquette—and so her gum box went unheeded.

One of the current musical shows has an orchestra leader who is a great clown. During several of the jazz numbers he has been cutting high didoes and in that manner becomes the enter of attention. Now the musicians' union has notified him that he will have to quit clowning or collect double salary because his conduct makes him an actor.

A vaudeville orchestra has been all but disrupted by the pranks of men in the upper right boxes. Not long ago one of the newspaper humorists wrote concerning the fun to be had by dropping pennies on the kettle drums of the orchestra, resulting in a flourish of concussion not written in the score. In one theater pennies have been rattling down on the drums, much to the consternation of the drummer and the leader. One of the village cut-ups threw a half-dollar which cut the drum head and put the drum out of commission until intermission.

DAIRYING IN MID-WEST SHOWS MUCH IMPROVEMENT NOW

7,900,000 Dairy Cows in Seven States of the Section

Chicago, Sept. 23.—(AP)—The cream jug of the middle west, the upper Mississippi valley, is filling up.

Seven states comprising this jug today have about 7,900,000 dairy cows, which is one cow for approximately every three human beings in these states. Milk products of the 7,000,000 dairy cows have been the prime factor in an economic evolution which is rapidly providing farmers with an all-year-round income. The states are Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska and the two Dakotas.

The economic change is the tendency away from one-crop farming, which dairying has led, and its most interesting manifestation the fact that in after the war deflation the value of dairy products suffered the least of all farm goods.

Authority for the statement that dairy products underwent smaller price reduction is J. Q. Emery, state dairy and food commissioner of Wisconsin, premier dairy state of the section. Mr. Emery estimated today that the money invested in dairying in Wisconsin is $2,988,000,000 and that milk is the source of 55 percent of the $343,000,000 gross income of Wisconsin farms.

Supplements Grain.
In Minnesota dairying has not displaced grain, but has supplemented it. The dairy products of Minnesota are valued at $225,000,000 a year with butter alone totaling $99,760,000.

Nebraska Shows Increase.
A. L. Haecker, secretary of the Nebraska Creamery Association, reports an increase of 20 percent in dairy cows in Nebraska during the last five years. The revenue from butter alone represents about $40,000,000 annually and this year the indication points to an increase of 4 to 5 percent.

Reports from Pierre, capital of South Dakota, says the dairying industry in that state is in its infancy but that the state department of agriculture hopes soon to help augment dairy farming.

Of the seven states, Illinois has the third largest dairy herd, Wisconsin and Minnesota exceeding it. The number of cows in Illinois is 1,194,000 and the farm value of the dairy products of the state $84,000,000 annually.

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service

The word "germ" means a seed. Bacteriologists tell us that there are germs so small that a million of them could play tag on the head of a pin and still have plenty of room to grow and raise families.

A germ is a rather large germ when it would require a mere four or five thousand bunched together to be barely visible to the naked eye.

The germ of bubonic plague is of fairly large organism. It takes only about forty thousand of them laid side by side to make an inch. It requires about sixty-five million typhoid bacilli to make a drop of anti-typhoid vaccine.

A porcelain filter will strain out such germs as these, but there are disease germs so infinitely small that under a little pressure they pass through the closely grained porcelain filters with the same ease that a gnat flies through an open window.

Germs are known by a wide variety of names. Some are called bacteria, bacilli, cocci, vibrios and so on.

Each group of germs has its special traits and habits, friends and enemies, but all of them are connected in some way with the great mystery called life. So far as we know, germs are the lowest form of life.

They are so far down in creation that it is often impossible to tell whether a particular kind is of an animal or vegetable nature and they are so much alike that it is hard to tell them apart.

By the use of powerful microscopes and by other means, scientists have identified many hundreds of different kinds of germs and have become so well acquainted with them that they know just where they like best to live, what they feed upon, how fast they multiply and the conditions under which they thrive or die.

Scientist First Studies Germs
When an unknown disease crops out somewhere, whether a disease of human beings, of animals, or of plants, the first act of the scientist is to become acquainted with the germ that may cause the disease.

He must learn all about it, where it lives, how it grows, what it eats, and what food or chemicals disagree with it. Once he becomes familiar with its habits, he is ready to wage war against it.

In order to become familiar with any particular kind of germ it must be captured and held in captivity under favorable conditions for growth and development.

The florist takes out his plants and transplants them to his greenhouses where he may study and develop them.

In the same way the bacteriologist takes disease germs embedded in specimens from sick patients and transfers them to his laboratory where they are kept in the proper kind of containers, nurtured and studied.

When the bacteriologist sets out to study a germ he finds that he has quite a bit of work ahead of him. Before he can hope to accomplish anything he must separate the particular germ he is after from the multitude of other germs it is associated with.

Really Swallowed the Knife

Jack Hill was killed on an amateur performance at Columbus, O., as a "great sword swallower." He apparently didn't believe in fooling the audience, because he really swallowed a nine-inch table knife. It was removed by a remarkable abdominal operation. The X-ray photograph above shows the knife in Hill's stomach.

gist accommodates his dangerous pets by bottling them up and giving them the right kind of food and temperature.

These bottled germs are known as cultures.

The study of germs in the laboratory is a most fascinating pursuit, but it is not an occupation at all suitable for nervous people. It is too dangerous.

Some of our best laboratory workers are women.

They appear to possess plenty of nerve, they are very persistent in their research and are careful. All of these qualifications are necessary in a good germ detective.

The laboratory worker is daily surrounded by deadly enemies and one little accident in the handling of disease germs may mean the end of all things for him. In another article I shall tell you something about martyrs of science.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

WANTS BETTER FIRE DEPT.

The City Council and the Chamber of Commerce, together with the business men of Dixon have taken it upon themselves to give us a bigger and better Dixon. In so doing they are spending $60,000 to give us a parking place, contemplating 40 blocks of paving, which will cost everybody concerned considerable.

These are all well and good but in my mind they have overlooked one of the most needy and important departments of the city—that of the Fire Department.

The firemen of Dixon have done excellent work with the equipment and number of men that they have, but could do more efficient work with modern equipment and more men.

The White truck has been used continuously for the last fourteen years. I wonder how near a 1910 model car would come to filling the needs of every car owner of Dixon.

Most of us have heard of the "One Horse Shay," we certainly would hate to have one of our fire trucks do the same thing I know, in other words the White has just about seen its days—it has earned a rest.

The Olds truck was not purchased as a fire truck, but is a truck chassis with the old horse drawn hose cart mounted upon it, the work was done by the local firemen and has given wonderful service, but it has not the equipment to fight large fires nor to stand up under the exacting service demanded.

It would cost about $18,000 to modernize the local department, some say that they cannot afford it. The increase would only be a few mills and besides, this is good news, the addition of modern equipment would reduce the fire insurance rates to such an extent that the increase in taxes would more than be offset by the decrease in the insurance rates.

This occurred recently when Sterling bought their pumper. The writer understands that this piece of equipment, while costing about $14,000, brought about a 22 per cent reduction in the insurance rates of that town which means that in about two years the truck would have paid for itself, besides the saving in property damage. This would certainly be something worth while and the same thing could be done in Dixon. We have notoriously high insurance rates

There are certain germs for which identification methods have not yet been worked out, such as for instance, the germs of smallpox, scarlet fever and measles. No one has as yet seen these germs, not even with the most powerful microscopes.

Some Germs Like Heat; Others Cold
One of the aims of those at work in the germ laboratory is to find out what kind of drugs or anti-toxins harmless to human beings will kill the germs so that when a person comes down sick with a germ disease he may be given a medicine that will not harm him, but one which will kill the disease germs in his body. It is even possible to administer remedies that will prevent the disease for years or during life in some cases.

Some germs like to live in the cold, but most of them prefer a warm temperature. The bacteriologist has disease germs embedded in specimens from sick patients and transfers them to his laboratory where they are kept in the proper kind of containers, nurtured and studied.

Can He Get In?

F. Pethick Lawrence, one of the most noted radical leaders in all Britain, is coming to America to attend the meeting of the Interparliamentary Union. He may meet the same exclusion ban pronounced on Shapurji Saklatvala, who cannot enter this country.

here, one of the highest rates if not the highest of any city in the state. The water company has done their part by installing electric pumps but every time they build up pressure they open a number of lateral and at the time of a serious fire might seriously hamper the work of the firemen, however this is not the water company's fault but the natural deterioration of pipes that were installed by plumbers years ago.

I would suggest that Dixon purchase a modern pump truck and have the White overhauled to use as an auxiliary truck, this would require an expenditure of about $18,000 but would give Dixon a modern and up-to-date fire department, as far as equipment goes, as the council recently purchased Chief Coffey a Lodge coupe. He has been deserving of this car for years.

The question of men comes next. We have five paid men, but they are by far not enough though they have striven heroically at all times—but fire is not a respecter of time nor persons. This means that in the majority of cases only two men answer an alarm. To even the scales it is plain that they cannot do much but must rely upon volunteers who are at the scene at the time. But all credit due them, they are not trained.

Dixon, according to her population, is authorized nine men. The addition of men to our force would reduce the insurance rates also. If not thought wise to add men why not have a volunteer organization. Sterling has one. They have at least ten trained volunteers at every fire beside three men that answer on the truck. That

Mrs. Charles Hatch, Sr., was hostess to the Sublette Women's Club on Sept. 17, at the church parlors. Mrs. Anna Barton had charge of the program. Her subject was, "Dreamers who would make life beautiful." Mrs. Barton gave a paper on the topic which brought out many dreams that had caused life to be more beautiful.

It also showed that the world's greatest achievements were once dreams, that the real dreamers of life were the inventors, artists, poets, orators, singers, etc., and that God's creation of the world and life was the most wonderful dream of all. Mrs. Catherine Tourtellott gave a piano solo.

Roll call then followed to which the members responded with a dream realized. This was also the day appointed for the kitchen shower. Mrs. Easter had charge of the decorations which were a white umbrella suspended over the table on which were the gifts. Each gift had a verse attached which was read by Mrs. Lefleman as she displayed them. The ladies were evenly divided and one-half decorated with whiskers and mustaches, the other half with fancy caps. The would be gentlemen escorted the ladies into lunch which was served at the close of the program by the hostess. How to stop BOILS!

There's only one way to stop boils. Stop the cause of boils! That's common sense—isn't it? All right. Boils thrive because the blood gets so weak in healthy, red cells that it can't throw off the impurities that get into the body. There's not enough rich, red blood to purify the system.

Now—S. S. S. builds back the blood to fighting strength. S. S. S. builds red-blood-cells—builds them by the millions! Boils dry up!

S. S. S. is the thing. Impurities that cause boils and other skin eruptions can't stand up against the rich, healthy, red blood that S. S. S. builds. That's all there is to it.

Stop boils with S. S. S. It's the way. Get it at any drugist. The larger bottle is more economical.

Then, little Marquise, my dear mother said to me something which impressed me very much. She said, "Men, my dear, have a most inconvenient faculty of being able to lock up disagreeable problems in some parts of their brains, and to forgetting them until they are ready to work on them again. Naturally, having sealed all these up in water-tight compartments, they do not want to have some one either opening them again or hammering on the outside in hopes of getting in."

"This is very different from us, Leslie. We women must be always huddling over our irritating little worries, while very often we forget all about the pleasant things of which we might be thinking."

I have found this all so very true. Little Marquise. Very often I find myself thinking the most unhappy thoughts, when if I would just stop to reason, I would find that I have more than most people have, to make me happy."

The pearls have been found, Little Marquise, and I am almost sorry. I shall never wear them again, unless I feel differently about them than I do now. I fairly writhed with horror when Jack opened the case and poured those jewels into my lap. I saw looking at me two lovely girls, who I am sure, by far, were the most beautiful string. And poor little Zoe, who never really had a chance, died because she wanted to preserve for me and my children those foolish white, waxy beads.

Jack wants me to take the children and go away for a while, and I have almost decided to do so. I find I must get the children away from their grandmother Prescott. When she heard, however, that I was thinking of going and taking them with me, she nearly raised the roof. To tell you the truth I wish I could go away and stay long enough to pry her away from this place.

Yes, I know it sounds terrible for me to write this, but Jack's mother is simply impossible. One moment she is the most abused woman on earth, and the next, she imagines herself a queen and is trying to run the whole household. If I'm out for an afternoon I come home to find my children demoralized and my servants ready to leave. Why is it that old people must make so much trouble in a household? Jack's mother has everything in the world that she asks for except where her wishes interfere with my servants or children, but she will not be happy, and neither will she let any one else be happy, and there you are.

In a small London apartment. NANNY MARRABY and JOAN ENDICOTT had been looking for the day when the Great War would be ended and PETER LYSTYER, NANNY's sweetheart, and TIM ENDICOTT, Joan's husband, would come back to them.

Six weeks previous to the time of this story, however, Peter was reported seriously injured.

Then, LIEUT. JOHN ARNOTT brought the tidings that Peter had lost his memory—that he did not remember his engagement to NANNY, Peter's fiancée, and that he did not know who she was while on leave in London.

Arnett tells NANNY about his unsuccessful attempts to make Peter remember his engagement. He tells of finding her letters and a photograph of her.

"I KNOW," NANNY tried to laugh, but it was more like a sob. "A dreadful photograph."

had taken last year on the sands at Margate—that was before I knew him—and the sun was in my eyes and my hair blowing all over the place, but it was the only one I had, and so . . . . .

She stopped, with a desolating memory of the day she had given it to LYSTYER, and of how he had kissed it and put it away in his tunic when they said goodbye.

"Yes," said Arnett. "Yes, that was the one. It was there, with your letters. I wanted to show it to him, but the doctor wouldn't allow it. He said it was no good forcing things—that I had far better let him alone. He always got so excited when we tried to make him remember anything."

"But my name," NANNY said eagerly. "Surely when you spoke my name to him—"

"I don't think I did speak it. I think all I said was, 'NANNY' and I better write and tell the girl in England!" He broke off. A little dry sob had escaped NANNY.

"No, no," she said as he paused. "Go on, please, please."

"He asked me what I meant. He said that I knew there was nobody in England he cared for. I remember he had told me months before that he hadn't a relation in the world."

"Yes, I knew that," NANNY answered. "He came from Vancouver when the war broke out and joined his old regiment."

Arnett's admiration of this girl was growing. She had grit, real grit. "What are you going to do?" he asked presently. "I—I hate to feel that—that I've had to bring this trouble to you. I'd give my right hand if I could undo it . . . . ."

"Perhaps I'd give a great deal more than that," she told him. "But it wouldn't be any good. And—and all my letters?" NANNY asked.

"I have them. I'll send them back to you if you wish."

"Yes, then, if you will, please let me have them."

"I'll bring them round tomorrow." They had reached the flat now, and Arnett stopped.

"There's one thing I wanted to ask you," he said hesitatingly. "Of course, you may not know anything about it, but . . . . . but LYSTYER keeps on asking about a signet ring of his; apparently it was a great favorite."

Something seemed to catch NANNY by the throat; for a moment she could not answer.

The ring that even then lay against her heart! The ring he had given her because it had been his most treasured possession—and he did not even remember having given it.

"I thought perhaps you might know something about it," Arnett said uneasily; he seemed to take her silence for negation. After a moment he held out his hand.

"I will say goodnight, then—I may call tomorrow and bring your letters."

"Thank you." He held her hand hard for a moment. "I think you're a wonderful woman," he said simply.

"I'm not, really. If you could only see into my heart, you'd know how I'm crying and railing against fate—"

she heard, however, that I was thinking of going and taking them with me, she nearly raised the roof. To tell you the truth I wish I could go away and stay long enough to pry her away from this place.

Yes, I know it sounds terrible for me to write this, but Jack's mother is simply impossible. One moment she is the most abused woman on earth, and the next, she imagines herself a queen and is trying to run the whole household. If I'm out for an afternoon I come home to find my children demoralized and my servants ready to leave. Why is it that old people must make so much trouble in a household? Jack's mother has everything in the world that she asks for except where her wishes interfere with my servants or children, but she will not be happy, and neither will she let any one else be happy, and there you are.

NO SUMMER NEXT YEAR WASHINGTON PROPHET STATES

Predicts Year Will be Exactly Like 1816; 1927 Alike, Too

By NEA Service

Boston, Sept. 23.—Better keep your fur coats and heavy "undies" and galoshes handy during the summer of 1926 and 1927.

For Herbert Janvyn Browne of Washington, probably the world's leading authority on long distance weather forecasting, says meteorological conditions now are exactly similar to those just prior to 1816—"The Year Without a Summer."

During that summer, our great, great grandfathers had to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the republic in below freezing weather.

Two weeks before a snowstorm swept down from Canada and blanketed the eastern part of the country as far south as Maryland.

Crop Failures

Disastrous crop failures resulted and Browne predicts the same "hard times" for the farmers during the next two years.

Browne, known as a "radical" among the meteorologists, expects to present his views to the Babson conference on meteorology which opens its sessions here Sept. 23.

Charles F. Marvin, head of the United States Weather Bureau, who says that any weather predictions for more than a few days in advance are pure guess work, heads the conservatives. Long range weather forecasting, he says, is a scientific impossibility.

PEACE OR WAR IS UP TO BEAUTIFUL BULGARIAN QUEEN

Her Skill and Love in Diplomacy May Prevent Outbreak

By NEA Service
London—The diplomatic skill of the world's most beautiful and skillful queen, which already has won her several victories in love and politics, now faces its supreme test.
Can the lovely Queen Marie of Romania prevent the threatened war between her country and soviet Russia over the possession of the rich and fertile country of Bessarabia?
For centuries war making seems to have been the chief occupation of royalty in that tiny section of the world known as the Balkans. In this area wars have started over things that seemed trivial to the rest of the world.
Yet almost overnight these conflicts have embroiled nearly all the Balkan states and then spread to other parts of Europe, as was the case with the World War.
Menacing Situation
Diplomats agree that a most menacing situation again exists in this "war hatchery." Should war come it is almost certain to involve other countries than Rumania and soviet Russia.

Queen Marie's great ambition has been to make her country dominant in the Balkans by making each one of her beautiful daughters a queen. In this way the "mother-in-law of the Balkans" has believed it would be possible to unite the tiny countries and preserve peace.
In this she has been partly successful.
One daughter is now queen of Yugoslavia and another married the now disposed king of Greece.
Royal Match Making
During the last year Queen Marie, apparently realizing that the Bessarabian question some day would reach a crisis, has shrewdly sought co-operation of the allies by visits to the capitals of western Europe.
Here again she combined her great game of love and politics, by seeking to arrange a match between her youngest daughter, Princess Ileana, and the world's most prized bachelor, Prince of Wales.
France seemed more friendly toward her than any other nation, but here again the queen showed her political skill. Marie knew a military alliance with France would alienate Great Britain against her, just at the time that country was establishing relations with the soviet.
And so her lack of complete success on her trip makes the problem now facing her all the more difficult to solve.

Bessarabia has been a potential cause of war for more than a century.
Russia acquired most of Bessarabia in 1812 through a treaty with Turkey. It remained in Russia's possession until 1856 when it was granted autonomy under Turkish rule.
In 1877 over Rumanian protests, Bismarck, the great German "iron chancellor," insisted on giving the country back to Russia, thus hoping to sow discord between Russia and Rumania, according to some historians.
Republic Proclaimed
Then came the World War and the Russian revolution. Bessarabia proclaimed itself independent under the name of the Moldavian republic.
But Rumania, anxious to extend its domains, took advantage of this situation to send troops into Bessarabia on the grounds that most of the people there wanted annexation.
Census figures show that the majority of the people in Bessarabia are Moldavian and closely akin to the Rumanians. For this reason Rumania's claim to the country was upheld at Versailles, despite protests of those in Bessarabia favoring independence. They sought a plebiscite to determine whether the country should be independent or ruled by Russia or Rumania.
Charges Soviet Plot
Soviet Russia has steadfastly refused to recognize the award to Rumania.
Rumania charges that Bolshevik agents have repeatedly tried to stir up revolution in Bessarabia.

The recent revolt against the Rumanians in Kishinev, the capital of Bessarabia, has brought the question to a crisis.
And now the great question of peace or war hinges largely on the skill of Queen Marie.
She can win for herself an even more notable place in history if she can avert war now.

OGLE CO. COW LEADS IN MILK GIVEN IN AUG. Holstein on Rock River Farm Topped All in the State

Urbana, Ill.—With almost 85 pounds of fat and slightly less than a ton and a half of milk to her credit for August, a purebred Ogle county Holstein cow belonging to Rock River Farm, Byron, last month took the honors for milk and butterfat production among the 12,900 or more dairy cows of the state that are being tested in dairy herd improvement associations, according to an announcement by G. S. Rhode, dairy extension specialist of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, who has charge of these associations.

Stephenson county came in for the high herd honors of the month when 17 purebred Holsteins owned by W. T. Rawleigh, Freeport, turned in an average production of slightly more than 52 pounds of fat and 155 pounds of milk for the month.
Ogle county not only placed the high producing cow for this month but also led all other counties in the number of high producers for August. This county had three among the first ten. Peoria county had two of the ten best herds for the month and thereby showed the way to other counties of the state. Stephenson county had two high producing cows among the ten best ones, while Jo Daviess, Lake, Moultrie, McLean and Crawford counties were each represented by one. In the list of high producing herds of the month Stephenson, Will, Lake, Moultrie, Jo Daviess, Vermillion, Kankakee and DePage counties each had one representative.

Some of the prehistoric dinosaurs were no bigger than chickens.
